Wall Street jittery over oil prices

CNN

NEW YORK Expect the upward march of oil and gas prices to overshadow bellwether corporate earnings, economic reports and a read on the health of the European banking sector—all of which are due this week.

Investors will spend most of next week grappling with whether the rising price of oil could crimp the stock market's 2012 rally.

All three indexes eked out another week of roughly 0.5 percent gains. The Dow Jones industrial average is up 6.3 percent so far this year, hitting its highest level since May 2008. For 2012, the S&P 500 is up 8.6 percent, and the Nasdaq is up 13.8 percent.

Still, economists and analysts worry that rising gas prices could cause consumers to cut back on spending, which could threaten an already shaky economic recovery.

U.S. crude oil prices are at their highest levels since May 2008, hitting $109.77 a barrel. U.S. oil prices climbed nearly 6 percent this week. In turn, the average price of a gallon of gas jumped more than 13 cents.

Investors will watch to see what Federal Reserve Chairman Ben Bernanke says about energy prices and the broader economy when he delivers his semiannual address to Congress on Wednesday.

"If there are any signs that the Fed would be supporting the Treasury or mortgage markets later this year because of energy prices, investors could take that as a buying opportunity," said Robert Tipp, chief investment strategist at Prudential Fixed Income.

Pain at the pump

Gas prices show no signs of easing up

CNN

NEW YORK Paying at the pump grew even more painful Sunday as gas prices climbed for the 19th day in a row.

The price of unleaded gasoline inched higher again overnight, rising 1.4 cents to a nationwide average of $3.69 a gallon Sunday, according to the motorist group AAA. That's a 30-cent increase from a month ago, when the nationwide average was $3.39 a gallon.

Average prices for regular gasoline are more than $4 a gallon in California, Alaska and Hawaii, and are just shy of the $4 mark in New York, Connecticut and Washington, D.C., according to AAA. The lowest average gas prices are in Wyoming and Colorado, where a gallon is going for less than $3.20.

Gas prices have been rising on the back of soaring oil prices, which have surged 10 percent during the past month amid fears that tensions with Iran will lead to an all-out war that causes a disruption in oil supplies.

Signs of an improving economy also have been boosting oil prices, along with the stock market, which has seen the S&P 500 rise by more than 8 percent in 2012.

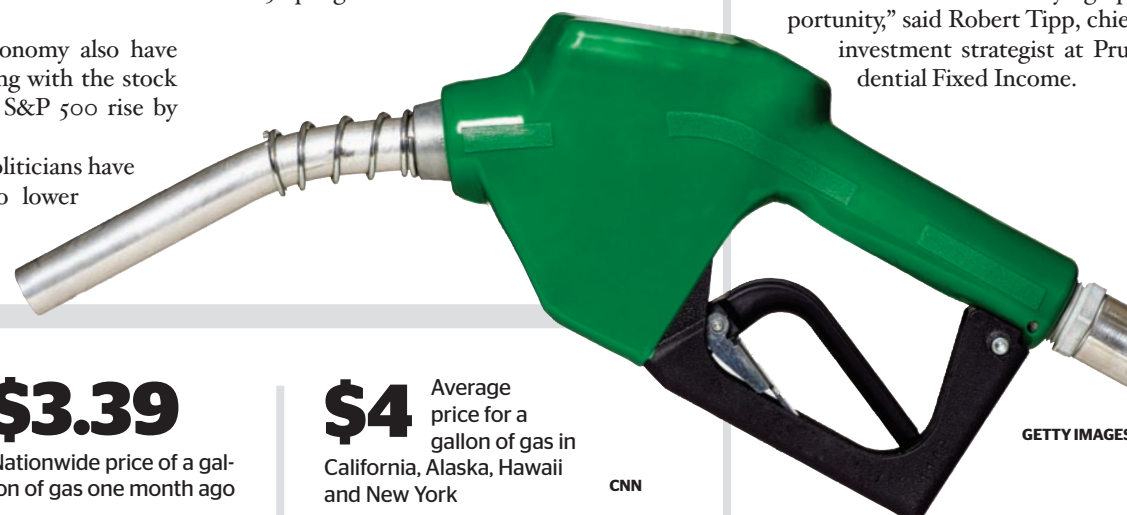

With gas prices soaring, politicians have been touting their plans to lower prices at the pump.

Newt Gingrich, struggling to regain momentum in the Republican presidential primary, is leading the way, promising to get prices down to $2.50 per gallon.

Stick a fork in the pork

Please don't pass the bacon.

I've had enough, thanks.

Enough of the drooling "nom nom nom" comments on pics of bacon-laden food, enough of the tickets to Baconfest Chicago 2012 selling out in five minutes and enough of restaurants stuffing bacon in everything from cupcakes to ice cream.

It's enough to put a gal off bacon forever, especially now that CNN has named our fair city the most gluttonous in the country, partially on the strength of the Baconfest craziness.

Now, true, it's been a long road to full-on bacon overload. When I first saw breakfast restaurants such as Walker Bros. putting bacon in pancakes and waffles, I was fine. I mean, you dip the bacon into your syrup sometimes anyway, right?

Bacon-wrapped scallop appetizers at a party? OK, sure. Whatever.

Chocolate-covered bacon started to push the envelope, but I was yet to be inspired to true anti-bacon sentiment. This whole baconmania thing would surely blow over, I assumed.

But then, seemingly overnight, restaurants and grocery stores started to put bacon in and with everything—and I do mean everything.

Baconnaise, bacon salt, bacon popcorn, bacon lollipops, bacon doughnuts and bacon hot sauce: There was no food too humble or too fancy to avoid the porky taint of bacon. We were cramming bacon into things like cheesecake, things that were ALREADY DELICIOUS. People, cheesecake does not need bacon. It does not need anything. It is already cheesecake.

At some fast-food joints, the standard question became, "Do you want bacon on that?" What? On my frosty? No thanks.

Traveling for your bacon is now optional. In San Francisco, there's a bacon food truck (called Bacon Bacon, of course) that delivers bacon to the masses. On your iPhone or Android phone, get a "Baconnection" app that provides you a menu of bacon-adjacent content such as bacon recipes and trivia.

It's a veritable bacon explosion. (The "bacon explosion," by the way, is a dish comprising two pounds of sausage and two pounds of bacon, wrapped up together and drowned in barbecue sauce. Who, exactly, would eat the resulting mess is unclear, but no less an authority than the New York Times saw fit to write about it.)

You guys, there is bacon dental floss now. There are bacon-flavored envelopes.

It's not even funny anymore.

It's no passing pig fancy, either. As the Baconfest website tells us, "Bacon was NEVER a 'fad,' and Bacon will NEVER be 'over.' Bacon is FOREVER."

I don't know about you, but that sounds like a challenge to me.

I say the bacon lunacy has gone far enough. It is time for the rational among us, the vegetarians, the Jewish, the health-conscious, the Muslim, the vegan and the people who just plain don't need bacon at every meal seven days a week to rise up and demand that we be heard.

We must seek out the dumb recipes that include bacon where it doesn't belong and rail against the restaurants that weirdly insert bacon into every dish.

Bacon will be returned to its right and proper place, beside two over-easy eggs or occasionally decorating a cheeseburger.

We, the bacon-sane, must not be pushed aside anymore in favor of the slobbering bacon groupies who can't shut up about bacon, who write love poems to bacon, who create websites and books to immortalize their bacon devotion. We must unite to overthrow our bacon overlords.

Our rallying cry: "Death to bacon!"

More than 35 percent of state under video gaming blackout

Chicago Tribune

The first video poker machines in Illinois to legally pay winners could be plugged in as soon as September, but only if gaming officials overcome steep staffing shortages to approve thousands of licenses.

Even when the games finally are running after nearly three years of delays, more than 35 percent of the state's population live in areas where the games remain illegal, a Tribune analysis has found.

That's because 77 communities have voted to ban the games since the law passed, and Chicago appears unlikely to overturn its existing prohibition on gambling machines—which together could cost the state nearly $200 million in revenue, projections show.

Mayor Emanuel has lobbied aggressively for a Chicago casino but has said little about overturning the city's ban and opposed legalizing video poker in the city during his campaign.

"The mayor has no plans to revisit the city's ban on video gaming at this time," said Tarrah Cooper, Emanuel's press secretary.

When asked if Gov. Quinn was pushing for Chicago to overturn its ban, his spokeswoman Brooke Anderson said, "the governor believes that's up to the people of Chicago."

Rep. Lou Lang (D-Skokie), an author of the video poker law, said if the Legislature granted Chicago a casino, it would give the city a chance to address all aspects of its gambling laws at once. But Lang also noted the state's Video Gaming Act allows communities to take 5 percent of the profits the games generate locally.

"The city of Chicago needs revenue, and now that video gaming is legal, I would think Chicago would give it some consideration," Lang said. "I can't say whether the mayor would use video gaming as leverage for a casino or not, but I can say it would make sense for them to want to address all gaming issues at once."

Ald. Patrick O'Connor (40th), the mayor's council floor leader, said the city has not taken up video poker "because it took the state so long to get its rules, regulations and policies in place."

O'Connor said the city's preference remains a land-based casino and if the Legislature were to allow one in the city, the council then could "determine whether there is enough gaming for our communities, which I think is a separate question at that point."

According to state projections, video poker could generate between $10 million and $20 million in additional revenue for Chicago annually. O'Connor doubted that would be enough to motivate the city to legalize the games.

At least 59 Syrian civilians and soldiers were killed Sunday in bloodshed that coincided with a vote on a new constitution that could keep President Bashar al-Assad in power until 2028. Oil giant BP has delayed the start of hearings in litigation related to its Gulf of Mexico oil spill for a week to allow more time to cut a deal with individuals and businesses affected by the disaster. Plaintiffs' lawyers say a $6.1 billion provision from BP does not cover the actual losses their clients have suffered.

Romney defends wealth

6 TRAVERSE CITY, Mich. In a tight race to win the Michigan primary, U.S. Republican presidential candidate Mitt Romney strongly defended his wealth Sunday and challenged voters to support someone else if they did not like his success.

Romney is worth an estimated $250 million and has been accused of being out of touch with most Americans' economic struggles.

The issue could be crucial in Tuesday's vote in Michigan, the state where Romney grew up but faces a tough fight after opposing President Obama's bailout of the U.S. auto industry. Romney's main rival in the state is Rick Santorum, who has presented himself as a blue-collar Republican.

Romney stood by his remark Friday that his wife drives "a couple of Cadillacs."

"I'm not perfect. I just am who I am," Romney said on "Fox News Sunday" when asked about the comment. "If people think there's something wrong with being successful in America, then they better vote for the other guy."

Romney has faced an unexpectedly tough fight to win the primary in Michigan. An average of polling data by RealClearPolitics showed him with just a 2-point lead over Santorum.

Santorum called Obama a "snob" Friday for wanting to send Americans to college—where he said they would be indoctrinated by liberal professors. Santorum also said Obama's goal "devalues the tremendous work" of those who do not attend universities.

"We have some real problems at our college

THE NATIONAL RACE

Santorum leads Romney in national polls, but surveys also show a majority of Republicans give Romney a better chance of defeating Obama in the general election Nov. 6 than the former U.S. senator from Pennsylvania.

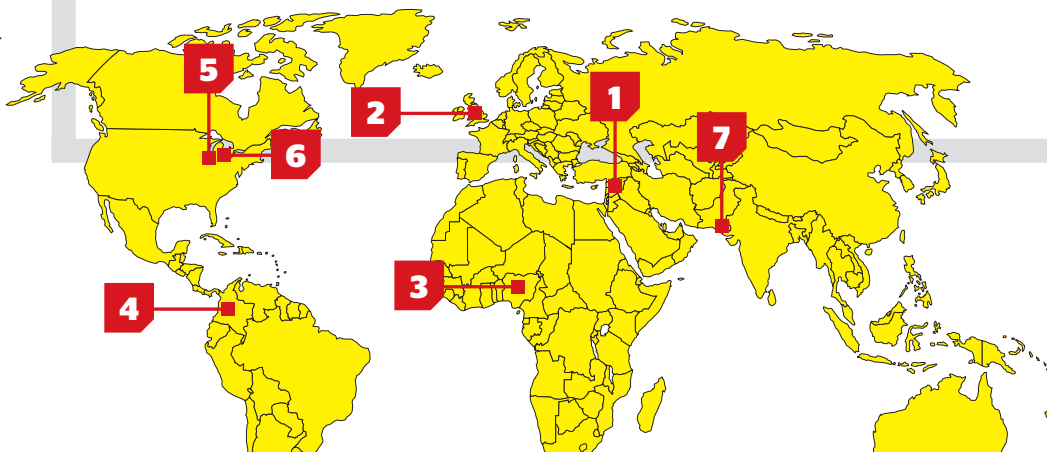

campuses with political correctness," Santorum said on ABC's "This Week with George Stephanopoulos."

Both Romney and Santorum worked to broaden their support Sunday at the Daytona 500 in Florida.

Also Sunday, Arizona Gov. Jan Brewer endorsed Romney's bid for the presidency. Arizona also is holding its primary Tuesday.

Psst! Office gossips are curbing the chat

There's less office gossip being whispered around the water cooler at work—and what's being said is nicer too, according to a new report.

The rumor mill is a mainstay at 63 percent of companies, according to a new survey from staffing service The Creative Group. Four years ago, 84 percent of firms said chitchatting at the company was commonplace.

Six out of 10 times, the gossip is inoffensive and lighthearted, according to the report. And while 20 percent of the talk is negative, respondents said it wasn't meant to be hurtful.

A separate, recent survey from electronics company LG found that 20 percent of workers in the United Kingdom believe less gossip and office politics would save valuable time.

Some experts, however, believe office gossip can actually be a valuable workplace tool.

A 2010 report in the Harvard Business Review found that, even though managers often ding rumormongers with lower performance ratings, gossipers often make strong personal connections with the people they spread information to.

Lin-Sanity ice cream leaves a bad taste in people's mouths

RedEye

Linsanity continues, for better or worse.

And for Ben & Jerry's, it was for the worst. The ice cream-maker had to apologize to N.Y. Knicks star and cultural phenomenon Jeremy Lin for its "Taste the Lin-Sanity" yogurt offered in Cambridge, Mass., featuring fortune cookies. In case you've missed the link: Lin is of Asian descent.

"We offer a heartfelt apology if anyone was offended by our handmade Lin-Sanity flavor," the store said on its Facebook page. "We are proud and honored to have Jeremy Lin hail from one of our fine, local universities and we are huge sports fans. Our intention was to create a flavor to honor Jeremy Lin's accomplishments and his meteoric rise in the NBA, and recognize that he was a local Harvard graduate.

"We try [to] demonstrate our commitment as a Boston-based,

“ We offer a heartfelt apology if anyone was offended by our handmade Lin-Sanity flavor.”

—Ben & Jerry's, on its Facebook page valued-led business and if we failed in this instance, we offer our sincere apologies.”

The fortune cookies were replaced by waffle cones in the Lin-Sanity flavor.

If Lin can receive the ice-cream treatment, then certainly other sports stars deserve their own flavor, no? Let's find them.

1 When Dale Sveum says Alfonso Soriano is "looking really young," he means Soriano put wheels on his walker.	... uh, his S-curl is still mad juicy?	... he's looking forward to the minor-leaguer they'll be getting in a trade.	... Soriano still "doesn't have a good grasp of the fundamentals."	... he strikes out like a really young, uncoordinated kid in Skokie Little League.
2 What's the biggest problem with the Blackhawks right now?	Too many day games. And night games.	I figure they just aren't drinking enough, right?	Goalies providing less protection than a GOP committee on reproductive rights.	They're starting to play their third periods like LeBron's fourth quarters.	In true L.A. Oscar fashion, they rolled out the red carpet to their goal for the Kings.
3 The "Linsanity" flavor failed, but what ice cream did you name after a sports star?	Taj Gibson. Steak-flavored ice cream, anyone?	Easy: Dikembe Mutombo's Mandingo mocha.	"D-Red as a Rose Velvet"—sweet and smooth.	I'll name a dozen ice creams after Dwight Howard if he agrees to join the Bulls.	Thibodough: Rose velvet ice cream, chunks of white mamba chips, a hint of booze and hot sauce.
4 Who deserves an Academy Award for what accomplishment in sports?	Any play-by-play announcer who makes a game sound more exciting than it actually is.	Tim Tebow for best guy who went to a crappy school but made something of himself.	The award for Best Performance in a Press Conference goes to Theo Epstein.	Omer Asik, best flopper.	In a repeat win, Chris Bosh, best supporting actress.
5 What prop would you use in the slam dunk contest?	Gisele Bundchen. That way no one will notice I can't dunk.	Chrissy Teigen and a tub of cool whip. Slam. Dunk.	Kim Kardashian. I'd get over her quicker than Kris Humphries.	Does Michael Jordan count as a prop? He would dunk for me.	The remote control. To change the channel.

No booze on the job?

Chalk one up for common sense. New Red Sox manager Bobby Valentine has banned drinking in the Red Sox clubhouse during games. Why, you ask? There had been reports of pitchers with a day off drinking in the clubhouse instead of sitting on the bench last season. "If you want to drink, drink at home," veteran David Ortiz said. And before you ask, no, pitchers are not allowed to stay home on their days off either.

FROM PARIS WITH LOVE

'THE ARTIST' WINS EXPECTED AWARDS; STREEP SURPRISES

FAST PAISED

Matt Pais

Hollywood got it right Sunday, as Adam Sandler picked up a record 11 Razzie nominations. Congratulations, Adam, you deserve it!

Oh, right, the Oscars. As expected, "The Artist," the best picture nominated for best picture, took home the night's top prize, as well as best director (Michel Hazanavicius) and best actor (the immensely likable Jean Dujardin). That left George Clooney emptyhanded, going home with only a lovely gold trophy by the name of Stacy Keibler.

Meryl Streep surprised everyone, including favorite Viola Davis, by winning the best actress award for the mediocre "The Iron Lady."

"When they called my name, I had this feeling I could hear half of America going, 'Oh no!' ...," Streep said. "But whatever."

Davis' "The Help" co-star Octavia Spencer received a standing ovation when she won best supporting actress, but her moving speech was cut short by producers.

Christopher Plummer won best supporting actor for "Beginners," which was 100 percent guaranteed about six months ago. At 82, he now is the oldest actor to ever win an Oscar. And in case we couldn't tell that Plummer was in his 80s, host Billy Crystal made multiple jokes about the age of both Plummer and fellow best supporting actor nominee Max Von Sydow.

Hosting for the ninth time, Crystal surprised everyone toward the beginning of the show by ... doing exactly what he always does:

singing. After last year's failed attempt to be young and hip, the Oscars' approach this year was clearly, "Ah, hell, let's just do what worked before."

Crystal awkwardly followed Spencer's win by saying "The Help" made him want to hug a black woman. Uh, not the best way to endorse a movie some felt touched more on white guilt than the African-American experience. Presenting best animated feature (which went » White-tails clad Will Ferrell and Zach Galifianakis get more laughs before they speak than Billy Crystal does all night.

» Penelope Cruz can narrate my life anytime she wants. Suddenly sitting at a computer typing would be ridiculously lovely and graceful.

» Now people around the world will walk out of "Hugo" and rave, "That was some fantastic sound mixing."

» Billy Crystal to Stacy Keibler: "You're a lucky girl; he's a very good kisser." He was speaking of Keibler's date, George Clooney, whom Billy kissed in the opening spoof of films.

to “Rango,” rather than the un-nominated and far more deserving “Winnie the Pooh”), Chris Rock was much funnier in one minute than Crystal was all night.

In the presenters department, Emma Stone displayed effortless charm, the “Bridesmaids” cast delivered welcome silliness and Jennifer Lopez dared her nipples to emerge, with her dress barely proving victorious. A Cirque du Soleil performance showed us what “North by Northwest” might have been like if Cary Grant used a trapeze, so that answers that question. And a strange beeping feedback noise accompanied most presenters and winners, continually making viewers around the world check their phones to make sure they didn’t miss a text.

“Hugo” was the night’s big winner in the technical categories, so be sure to listen for the sound mixing if you see the movie. More worth seeing is best foreign language film “A Separation” and best documentary “Undeclared,” which opens Friday. Good timing, huh? About as good as Sacha Baron Cohen’s, as he poured ashes on Ryan Seacrest on the red carpet and told him he was now wearing Kim Jong-Il. That’s the sort of surprise that doesn’t appear nearly enough during the Oscars themselves.

Pain in the ashes

By Curt Wagner

REDEYE

Sacha Baron Cohen crashed the Oscars on Sunday as “The Dictator,” dumping the “ashes” of the late North Korean leader Kim Jong-Il on Ryan Seacrest and the red carpet.

Dressed as Admiral General Aladeen, “The Dictator” from his upcoming movie, he was accompanied by two women in military uniforms and red berets. He carried the ashes in a cremation urn with an image of Kim Jong-Il on the outside.

“I’m wearing John Galliano, but the socks are K-Mart,” he told E! red-carpet host Seacrest before pouring ashes all over Seacrest’s tux. He said he was thrilled to bring his “dear friend and tennis doubles partner Kim Jong-Il to the Oscars.”

Security led Baron Cohen away, and Seacrest was not happy. He kind of flipped out as he brushed off his tuxedo.

Tina Fey thought it was funny, telling Seacrest: “You’re a victim of comedy.”

Baron Cohen continued to dump ashes on the carpet as he made his way into the Hollywood and Highland Center.

» Never one to make an easy joke, Billy Crystal makes a crack about Jonah Hill’s weight. Cue awkward shot of Hill not having it.

» The one thing everyone who sees “The Artist” agrees on is that Uggie the dog is great. And director Michel Hazanavicius slams the pooch in his speech? Ruff.

» Heartfelt montage about stars’ movie memories helps clarify who’s to blame for Adam Sandler films. Didn’t expect it to be Sean Connery.

Something new

It's an Oscars red carpet like you've never seen before

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

We've come to the end of the awards season fashion race: the Academy Awards. Our favorite stars didn't disappoint Sunday, breaking out of their sartorial boxes to bring us some really unexpected looks. Check out who worked it—and who needs to take another peek in their closet.

DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEDANA; GETTY IMAGES PHOTOS

JESSICA CHASTAIN

We've been crossing our fingers Jessica would go outside the box and get a little wild Sunday, and she didn't disappoint. The intricate gold embroidery was even more incredible up close.

MAYA RUDOLPH

She took our breath away in a gown that's miles better than her "Bridesmaids" wedding dress. This color is absolutely perfect, and her romantic hair keeps it from being harsh.

GWYNETH PALTROW

All hail Queen Gwyneth! We're guessing this probably is something she glides around the house in on a regular basis. This is kinda awesome.

MICHELLE WILLIAMS

By now, we all know Michelle's style: Cute, vintage and sweet but NEVER revealing. This is a majorly stepped-up version of her usual outfit, and it's completely perfect on her—right down to the little bow at her hip.

TIE ONE ON

One-shouldered gowns took center stage Sunday as the big trend of the night. How did it shape up? D.M.

KATE MARA

We really want to know how much Rooney's sister can move her arm in that thing.

STACY KEIBLER

She really brought it for her biggest night as George Clooney's arm candy.

ROSE BYRNE

The shoulder (almost) distracted us from the fact that her hem was unfortunately short.

MISSI PYLE

It's like the mirror image of Kate Mara. But with brooch action!

ROONEY MARA

Emerging from a dark, gothic season, Rooney swans her way in wearing the perfect combination of structured and delicate. Casting agents, take note: This girl is the real deal.

VIOLA DAVIS

She was having a truly fantastic awards season ... until now. We applaud Viola's choice to wear her hair in its natural texture, but this color is so obviously unnatural that it distracts from her beautiful face. Also the dress is le terrible.

SHAILENE WOODLEY

Girl, come on! We were really hoping Shailene would blow this one out of the water after her snub, but this looks like what Fraulein Maria might wear to a choral recital.

BERENICE BEJO

Seafoam? Nooooooo! The lovely French nominee made a major misstep with old lady lace and a toddler color.

ROMANCE PLANET

BY JENNIFER SHEPHERD | READ MORE AT LIPSTICKMYSTIC.COM

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20

You could be trying to come up with a practical way of making a complicated relationship work. You might have to devise a better schedule, a more realistic game plan or a new communication method. Mars says keep at it.

Aries March 21-April 19

As Mercury moves into your sign, you could decide to become painfully honest with your lover. "You kiss like a dead fish." "Your hips remind me of oversized pillows." This probably won't work out too well, but that won't stop you.

Taurus April 20-May 20

You always like to be the boss, but your partner might decide to take control of your relationship this week. Mars is creating some intriguing shifts of power. You'll have to decide whether you're willing to compromise.

Gemini May 21-June 21

Sometimes your approach to sex is cold and clinical. You do your business, enjoy yourself and get on with your life. That person you've been having fun with might want more. The sun says don't be cruel.

Cancer June 22-July 22

You've never been much of a joiner, and you hate group activities. But Pluto is urging you to push past that resistance and get involved with some people who share your interests. You need a break from those intense one-on-one friendships.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22

Someone you've been involved with could prove to have a hidden agenda, thanks to Saturn. That hot guy is just using you to prove to his parents that he can go out on the occasional date with a nice girl.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22

You're infamous for being super critical, and right now you're picking apart your lover. Mars is trying to remind you that nobody is perfect—not even you.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23

Your honey wants to talk about something important, but you don't want to expose your own vulnerability. Mercury is telling you to get over it. If you want a grown-up relationship, superficial will take you only so far.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21

A moon opposition has you feeling bored or annoyed with your lover. You're wondering if a threesome would fix things. Maybe monogamy just isn't for you.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21

You could be impatient at how slowly a new romance is developing. You've been wanting to get closer to that certain someone, and things seem promising, but you're not where you want to be just yet. Mercury will help you make progress.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19

Your honey is making a list of demands, and you don't appreciate it. The moon is reminding you that relationships take a certain amount of care and tending. If you neglect them, they wither on the vine. Do the work.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18

Mercury is creating some emotional explosions. Maybe your longtime honey will make a shocking confession. The plot thickens.

Who's the next big star? Jamie Kennedy hopes he comes from Wicker Park

ABOUT LAST NIGHT

Jamie Kennedy is on a mission to make professional wrestler and Wicker Park resident Colt Cabana a star.

Kennedy—known for his roles in "Scream," "Son of the Mask" and "Malibu's Most Wanted"—has signed the 31-year-old Cabana to his Jamie Kennedy Entertainment.

Cabana (real name: Scott Colton) is more than a wrestler. The Deerfield native also hosts a podcast, stars in a Web series and has dabbled with stand-up comedy and improv. Jamie Kennedy Entertainment will first help distribute Cabana's 2011 documentary, "The Wrestling Road Diaries," to a larger audience and then get to work on other wrestling-related projects.

"The 'Road Diaries' did amazing for one person selling it out of their tiny apartment and shipping it all over the world," Cabana said by email. "What Jamie is going to do though is help me reach outlets I'm unable to reach such as Netflix, film festivals, iTunes and cable television.

"That's the real power of this deal. The wrestling world knows exactly who I am and they supported the movie heavily. ... Jamie knows how to reach a group of audience that wouldn't know of 'my world.'"

Kennedy recently filmed WWE Studios' "Bending the Rules" with retired WWE superstar Edge and, as Cabana put it, got a bit of the wrestling bug in the process.

"He constantly tells me how impressed he is with my hustle and unwillingness to give up," Cabana said. "It's his mission to 'make me a star.' It's a great feeling and truly rewarding to work this hard at my craft and I finally have someone who really believes in me."

THE DIGITS
$24.7 million

That's how much "Act of Valor" brought in at the domestic box office to win its debut weekend, Bloomberg reports. "Tyler Perry's Good Deeds" opened in second place with $16 million.

Fool's gold

Take that, Eddie Murphy. Adam Sandler shattered his fellow comic's record Saturday by racking up 11 nominations for the Razzie Awards. The show, which honors the worst in film, took particular offense to "Jack & Jill," "Bucky Larson: Born to be a Star" and "Just Go With It," all of which Sandler had a hand in as a writer, actor or producer, thr.com reports. The "winners" will be announced April 1—aka April Fools' Day.

4 Good news for fans of raunchy animated spy comedies: FX has renewed "Archer" for a fourth season, avclub.com reports.

Care to dance?

Maksim Chmerkovskiy, the handsome bad boy pro of "Dancing With the Stars," tells the Canadian version of "Entertainment Tonight" that he has yet to hear if he's back on the show, which returns next month. The dancer tiffed memorably with the judges, especially Len Goodman, last season.

LUNCH LADY

Yeah, Blue Ivy Carter is kind of a big deal. Jay-Z and Beyonce took their daughter out to lunch in New York City on Saturday, Blue Ivy's first appearance in public, eonline.com reports. Her fashion statement? A blanket, in which mom Beyonce, holding her bundle of joy close, kept her wrapped as photographers snapped away.

Adele's 'Rain' event

Adele ought to consider dropping the "2" from the title of her Grammy-winning album "21": It's projected to finish as the top-selling album in the country for a 22nd week when numbers are made official Wednesday, billboard.com reports. That's the most weeks at No. 1 since Prince and the Revolution's "Purple Rain" soundtrack in 1984.
